The Senate met with the honorable House in the Representatives

presentatives' chamber, when his Excellency the Governor came in, attended by the committee appointed for that purpose, the Secretary, Treasurer and the honorable Council, and delivered the following Message, viz.

Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Representatives,

SELECTED by the citizens of the State and assembled at this time agreeably to your own determination, for the important purpose of promoting the general welfare; it must afford great satisfaction that our systems both of state and national government are so well adapted to this desirable end.—To redress public grievances, if any such there are, and to make laws calculated to secure the blessings of liberty and advance the happiness of the people must be a pleasing employment.

The great degree of harmony and tranquility, so apparent as it respects the internal concerns of the State must be highly gratifying, and if the welfare of the people requires an amendment of any of the laws now in force, or that new laws should be made, these circumstances must be known to their Representatives.

United with other States by a Federal compact for certain purposes, our interests are inseparably connected with that government which is endeared to us by the highly beneficial effects it has produced.

When we see a foreign nation overturning ancient systems of government without any regard to their form, extending robbery and devastation as far as their forces can reach; when we see them contemning all moral and religious obligations; despising national compacts; plundering our citizens while in pursuit of lawful commerce; insulting our government, and threatening us with the fate of nations it has degraded and destroyed; at such a time as this we should highly prize the blessings of good government, and determine with one voice and mind to support and defend our rights and privileges against all hostile attempts whatever.

Much of the blood and treasure of the United States of America has been expended in obtaining the right of governing themselves, in such manner as they should choose ; this great object being gained, our system of general government has been formed in as free a manner and under circumstances as favourable, perhaps more so, than that of any government which ever existed over such an extensive territory.—It is such a system as the people have chosen, may be altered when it shall be found necessary. The persons appointed to administer it, return to the class of citizens at short intervals, and others are selected in their places ; what more can be desired : If this is destroyed where shall we look for a free government.

While the French nation was apparently pursuing measures for the promotion of liberty, they had the good wishes, at least, of a large proportion of the citizens of these United States ; but unfortunately for our country they have had much encouragement from the conduct of many citizens when it seemed almost impossible that any one should entertain an idea that the freedom of man was their object ; after they had prostrated governments once free and tyrannized over the citizens, and after it had become apparent that universal domination was its object. The conduct of those who rule over the French nation has for a long time been hostile to our own by their acts and intrigues, aided by the conduct of some of our own citizens our government has been traduced : attempts have been made and in some instances succeeded, in exciting unreasonable jealousies among the people, persuading them that they have a separate interest from those whom they have elected to administer the government ; no services, however wise, faithful and disinterested, and however long continued, have been sufficient to secure some of our best citizens from calumny, and some of our own periodical publications seem to be prostituted to this purpose, I need only mention the attempts to abuse a WASHINGTON and an ADAMS.

Peace on honorable terms is undoubtedly the desire of all good citizens. The conduct of the President in sending three envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary to the French republic, is full evidence of his opinion on this subject ; before the instructions given these envoys were made public, reports were circulated that the President had not a desire for peace ; and suspicions were excited that his instructions were not calculated for that purpose, but when they became public, it was acknowledged by the enemies of his administration that those reports and suspicions were without foundation ; the instructions are in the hands of many citizens and should be read by all ; it is difficult to imagine how they could have gone further without deeply wounding the interests and independence of our country. These extraordinary exertions having failed of the desired effect, it is not easy to discern what more can be done in this way.—Determined to preserve our rights as an independent nation, such measures will undoubtedly be taken by the general government as shall appear best calculated for that purpose, and I rejoice that the citizens of this State are so well united, and have given so many proofs by the official acts of the Legislature, and otherwise of their firm adherence to our national government ; confidence in its administration and determination to support it.

Presuming that a law establishing a new proportion of taxes will be passed the present session, and as it usually requires requires a considerable time to determine the principles and prepare the bill, permit me to recommend an early attention to this subject.

The present state of the treasury will be laid before you, from which you will be enabled to determine what further measures may be necessary, respecting the finances of the State.

A letter from his Excellency the Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and a Resolution of the Legislature, respecting an alteration in the Constitution of the General Government—also a letter from his Excellency the Governor of the State of Connecticut, and a Resolution of the Legislature of the same purport will be laid before you ; the subject is highly important and I doubt not will be duly considered.

Whatever bills you may think proper to pass will be attended to with candor, and it will be highly pleasing to me to unite with you in measures calculated to advance the welfare of our common country.

The committee appointed to draught an answer to His Excellency's address reported the following, viz.

May it please your Excellency,

THE Senate of the State of New-Hampshire, with particular pleasure, meet your address at the opening of the present session of the legislature.

Assembled for the purpose of consulting the common good of our constituents, we contemplate with satisfaction the advantages we enjoy under a free Government, to render a people happy—the effects of which are so apparent in our present internal tranquility and union.

While

While we view the nation of France under the false pretext of establishing liberty amongst themselves, and other nations of the earth, tyrannizing over the victims of their ambition ; unprovokedly and indiscriminately desolating cities, and overturning Governments, we cannot but prize the blessings of our own, and resolve at every hazard to defend it.

The Constitution of our General Government secures to us every privilege which a rational mind can desire, and is the admiration of the wisest politicians.

The intercourse of kind offices between the French nation and America, and the mutual services rendered each other for many years, had united them to us, in bonds of amity, which no inconsiderable cause could have broken ; and while the liberty and happiness of man appeared to us their only object, our good wishes attended them in every pursuit ; but avarice and power gaining ascendancy over honesty and reason, hurried them on to such wild extravagancies as astonished the most friendly nations and incurred our just resentment.

When we turn our attention to the long continued depredations on our commerce, the repeated insults to our government in the rejection of our Envoys, and the insidious measures pursued to divide and distract our councils, every tender feeling is extinguished ; but what better can we expect from a nation divested of piety and every moral sense, and whose creed is Atheism ? with such, friendship cannot be maintained, and solemn treaties are as idle tales.

It is to be lamented that any American citizen should take a part on the side of our enemies, to calumniate our favorite rulers and weaken the arm of government.

—We lament also the abuse of that fundamental privilege in our Constitution, the liberty of the press ; but calumny when issuing from some particular periodical fountains and aimed at a WASHINGTON or an ADAMS, is praise : for such illustrious characters need only to be named to be admired ; whose wise and patriotic exertions from the commencement of our revolution to the present day, have uniformly tended to obtain and preserve our liberty and independence.

The measures pursued by the Executive of our General Government, in appointing and instructing Envoys with a view to operate a reconciliation between these United States and the French Republic, an evidence to us of superior wisdom and an ardent desire for peace ; and the effect of their negotiation convincing that further attempts would prove fruitless. Nothing therefore remains but to place ourselves in a proper situation of defence, having no alternative but the ultimate argument of injured republics ; but in any event relying on the wisdom of our constituted authorities to dictate, we shall ever stand ready to co-operate with them for the general safety.

The important and interesting subjects contained in the communications from our neighbouring States, together with those which more immediately concern this, will meet our early and due attention, confident of your Excellency's readiness to unite with us in every measure conducive to the welfare of our common country—which report was accepted.—And Voted that Mr. President Shepard, Mr. Fogg and Mr. Hartwell, be a committee to wait on His Excellency the Governor, and present him with the foregoing answer to his address, made to both branches of the legislature the present session.

The committee waited on him accordingly.

Mr. Orr requested liberty to enter his objections to the passing of the bill on the journals, which was granted, and are as follows, viz..

In the preamble of Mr. Blodgett's bill it is asserted, that "he has nearly completed the great work of opening and cutting a canal by Amoskeig falls," which assertion is not well founded.

In the 5th enacting clause, he and his associates are authorized to build a wharf or dam half way across the river, which (as the current runs in the time of a freshet) will inclose the principal part of all the loose lumber which may be turned into the river above Amoskeig, and thereby obstruct the passage of logs and masts, to the damage of such as may be interested in that business, as all such timber, unless attended by the owner or his agent, will be subjected to double toll, to be taken at the option of the proprietors of the canal.

In the paragraph which specifies the rates of toll, seventeen cents per ton is allowed for pine timber generally, ly, if attended by the owner, otherwise forty cents per ton, which will amount to more than one third of the value of the timber at the foot of the canal.

For masts, seventeen cents is allowed for every inch of their diameter, which, for a 15 inch mast will amount to, (nearly) one third part of its value at the foot of the canal.
